charleston offers the only site for a first-class navy yard between flatterns and Key West, in the opinion of the commission on navy yards and haves headed by Itear Admiral Helm. The commission's sixth promining report, submitted to the senate last Frelay, said that all sites on the gulf are "remote from waters fordering on the Windward islands and the Caribbean sea, where it is full are "remote from waters for the Caribbean sea, where it is full are "remote from waters for the Caribbean sea, where it is and the Caribbean sea, where it is thought bature naval hostilities are likely to take place," but added be-cause of the possibility that the fleet's communication with northern yards and resources might be interrupted. base of supply, with ample docking and repair facilities on the gulf of Mexico might become of vital import-ance. Hurricanes along the south Atlantic and gulf coast would be detri ments to navy yards, the commission reported, and storms of recent years would have damaged even the largest ments to havy yards, the commission reported, and storms of recent years would have damaged even the largest vessels. But even had a suitable location for a first-class yard been decided upon, its establishment would not be necessary, as the commissioners helieve the Charleston plant could take care of all work the navy needs in those waters. "From a study of strategical requirements," the report continues, "the commission is led to believe that the first line of special defense for the gulf of Mexico should be in the Florida straits and the Yucatan channel. An operating base will be necessary for submarines, destroyers, auxiliary vessels and aircraft assigned to these localities. Key West seems to be better located strategically for this purpose than any other site available. It will be necessary to construct an artificial harbor for vessels based thereon as protection against hurricanes." The commission was appoint-

Those who have watched every phase of the investigation, which was demanded by former Chief Game Warden Richardson, are convinced that the entire hearing has, so far that the entire hearing has, so far as the public is concerned, given Col. Richardson an absolutely clean bill of health. The afternoon session, the fourth of the hearing, was really only a sort of winding up of the entire affair. There were three features of Friday's hearing:

First, as to the packing of the Audubon society, with regard to securing a recommendation of the society for the appointment of a chief game warden by the governor. Mr. Gibbes, Governor Manning's appointee, admitted on cross-examination, that he had also, following what he termed the precedent established, "drummed up" members of the society to vote for him for the recommendation and had himself voted several hundred proxies, which gave him the nomination of what has been heretofore termed in this correspondence as the "Rump convention" of the society to the transfer of the society to the society to tion of funds, but that he had felt and still felt that the office was being conducted irregularly in the respects set out," and further contending that probably the investigation, in the regard of inquiring into the matters upon which he had based his veto message, was an "encroachment" by the legislative department upon the executive which in this instance the governor, against lack of precedent, had waived in courtesy to the senate. Third, the failure to produce any

The governors testimony admitted, he said, in fairness to Richardson, that according to the statement of State Auditor Bradley, gasoline and ipkeep of automobiles had been paid for by Col. Mr. Gibbes, Governor Manning's ap-pointee as chief game warden, was on the stand for nearly an hour. He ad-mitted that he had paid Mack Huy, former bookkeeper for Richardson, over four hundred dollars in one month and Game Warden Little of Laurens, over one thousand dollars in November and December of last year, which he said included com-missions, to them under a contract of "immediate necessity" because he felt it was necessary to get his forces together quickly, as he felt and that he had kept within the law, and if he found his system was wrong as a result of his inexperience, he would change it.—Charleston American.

No Price-Fixing for Cotton .- There will be no effort on the part of congress to fix the price of last year's cotton crop, and probably no effort to fix the price of the 1918 crop, according to a telegram which has been received in Atlanta from Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, who is close-ly in touch with the situation in Washington.

Washington.

If the congress attempts to fix the price of cotten it will have to fix the price also on products manufactured from cotton, and will have to extend its price-fixing regulations to many other commodities, declares the sentator, who is determined that the farmers of Georgia and other southtern states shall not be deprived of the benefits they are now enjoying through natural laws of supply and demand, while western wheat farmers have had a price fixed for their product by the government which is practically equivalent to the present market price of cotton.

Senator Smith further gives out the highly interesting and significant information that all the talk of fixing its price-fixing regulations to other commodities, declares th

senator smith further gives out the highly interesting and significant in-formation that all the talk of fixing the price of cotton is manufactured by speculators for the deliberate purpose of intimidating farmers into sell-ing their product at a declining price. This trick has actually succeeded already in measurably reducing the price of cotton, he declares, but in the future the farmers should not allow themselves to be misled by any such false reports.

SURE TO CATCH HIM EITHER GOING OR COMING. MR. HOOVER

The Ordinary Life Contract of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Com-Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company is, without exception, the most attractive issued by any Company in the world, when taken on what is known as the Accelerative Endowment Plan. The plan was figured out by Broomfield J. Miller, Actuary of the Mutual Benefit, in 1874. It appeals to any man who appreciates his obligation to protect those dependent on him while they are not in position to protect themselves, and at the same time realizes that after the time comes that dependents no longer need protection realizes that after the time comes that dependents no longer need protection He May Need Protection Himself. It is a contract under which the holder is absolutely sure to win, whether he lives or not, provided, of course, he continues to annually arrange the comparatively small premium called for in the contract; in other words he will certainly "catch the coon either going or coming." It is not practical to give or coming." It is not practical to give a detailed and satisfactory exposition of the plan within the space at my dis-posal; but if you are sufficiently inter-ested in the protection of both yourself and your dependents to ask for details, shall be pleased to "show you." The Mutual Benefit attaches at present, a are hereby notified to make payment war clause to all policies issued on the lives of applicants between 14 and 45 years of age, and in case the policyholder enters the service of the U.S., an extre promise of 2550 and the present the same to us, duly authenticated, within the
